Manifesto of Henry the Fifth. The mahifesto of the Count de Chambord, so often alluded to, has been received in Paris. It is as follows:

"Farncimans: During the trials my country has been exposed to I have condemned myself to voluntary inaction and to silence. I could not forgive myself if I had, for a single moment, aggravated its embarrassments and its perils. Separated from France, it is yet dear and sacred to me, as much and more than if I had never quitted. I know not if it will be allowed me some time to serve my country; but I am very certain that it will not have to reproach me with a word or an act which can affect her prosperity and her repose. It is her honor as well as mine—it is regard for her future—honor as well as mine—it is regard for her future—ti is my duty towards her—which induces me to raise my voice this day.

"Frenchmen, you desire monarchy; you have admitted that it alone can render you, with a regular and stable government, that security of all rights, that guarantee of all interests, that permanent record of a strong authority and of a wise liberty, which found and secure the happiness of nations. Do not give yourself up to illusions which, sooner or later, will be fatal to you. The new empire proposed to you cannot be that temperate and durable monarchy whose benefits you await. People are deceived, and they deceive you, when they promise them to you in its name. True monarchy, traditional monarchy, supported on hereditary rights and anotioned by time, can alone put you in possession of those precious advantages, and enable you to enjoy them forever.

horeditary rights and annetioned by time, can nlone put you in possession of those precious advantages, and enable you to enjoy them forever. The genius and the glory of Napoleon were not sufficient to found any thing stable; his name the memory of his acts can still less do so. Security is not re established by disturbing the principle on which the throne reposes; and all rights are not consolidated by disregarding that which is amongst us the necessary basis of the monarchial order. The menarchy in France is the royal house of France, indissolubly united to the nation. My ancestors and yours have passed centuries, laboring in concert, according to the usages and the necessities of the period, in the development of our noble country. The French, during 1,400 years, alone amongst all the people of Europe have always had princes of their nation and of their blood at their head. The history of my ancestors is the history of the progressive greatness of France; and it was that monarchy which andward having the is the history of the progresive greatness of France; and it was that monarchy which endowed her with the conquest of Algiers, so rich in future prosperi-ty, so rich already by the high military reputations which it has created, and the glory of which is which it has created, and the glory of which is added to all your glories.

"Whatever may be the designs of God with respect to you and to me, who have remained the chief of the ancient race of your kings—the heir of that long line of monarchs who during so many centuries have increased and caused to be respected the power and the fortune of France—I owe it to myself, I owe it to my family and to my country, to protest loudly against false and perilous arrangements I consequently maintain my right, which is the surest guarantee of yours, and, taking God to witness, I declare to France and to the world that, faithful to the laws of the kingdom and to the tradition of my ancestors, I will religiously preserve, to my last breath, the deposit of the hereditary monarchy of which Providence has entrusted to me the care, and which is the only port of refuge where France, the object of our love, may, after so many storms, at length find rest and happiness.

"Fromsdor, October 25, 1852."

The Webster Obsequies.

Boston, November 30 .- The funeral ceremonies of the late Daniel Webster took place to day, and constituted the most splendid and imposing pageant ever witnessed in this city. Business was entirely suspended, and almost all the public and Horr Evall. Va. private buildings throughout the line of the pro-cession and elsewhere were draped in mourning. All the public offices were closed and decorated one of crape. The hotels, newspaper offices, &c., were also gorgeously decorated with appropriate emblems of grief. Flags were everywhere suspended at half mast and minute guns fired. Yast numbers of strangers were in attend- | Hon R F Stockton, N J gate probably to 40,000 persons. The delegations om Salem, Cambridge, Charlestown, Worcester Roxbury, and other adjacent cities were very large

The Legislature of New Hampshire, accompanied by General Pierce, arrived early this morning, and were escorted to the State House.

General John S. Tyler acted as chief marshal. The procession commenced moving at 11 o'clock, and proceeded through a large number of streets to Fancuil Hall. It was of immense extent, every association in the city, as well as many from elsewhere, being represented. The Mayor and Councils, Governor Boutwell and suite, General Pierce and the Legislature and Council of New Hamp-shire, the judges of the different courts, and the members of the bar, military, firemen, &c , were in the line of the procession. The escort to the funeral car, which was magnificently decorated, was under the command of Brigadier Genera Samuel Andrews. Fancuil Hall was most taste fully and appropriately decorated. The interior was lined with black cloth, extending over the whole length and breadth of the building. The drapery over the top ceiling was fastened at the centr plece with a silver star. Healey's magnificent painting of Webster occupied a prominent place on each side of which were placed portraits of Washington, and Faneuil the donor of the hall. Over the whole were thrown the beams of many gaslights, presenting a tout ensemble beautiful b yond description. When the funeral cortege had entered the hall the celebrated Germania Orchestra played with magnificent effect Handel's celebrated "Dead an impressive prayer was delivered by the Rev Samuel K. Lothrop. The eulogy was delivered by the Hon. George S. Hillard; and the ceremonics closed with a benediction.

Steamboat Sunk. CINCINNATI, November 29.—The steamer Boston, from New Orleans for Louisville, was sunk near Smithland on Thursday, and will prove a total loss. No lives were lost. The boat was worth $30,000, and insured for $25,000. She had a valuable cargo, part of which was saved.

PHILADELPHIA, November 30.—A fire broke out this morning about 5 o'clock in the extensive warshouse of Mesers Jessup and Moore, Commerce street, which, with its valuable contents, were totally destroyed. The loss is very heavy, but partially covered by insurance.

The flames spread to the adjoining warehouse, occupied by Mesers, Haznay & Co., which was also proved deveged. Several other buildings continue.

BALTIMORE CORRESPONDENCE.

BALTIMORS, November 30-5 p. m. Nothing has yet been done to check the perpetration of outrages on peaceful citizens, which continue to be of nightly occurrence. Last night Mr. Alexander Franklin, from West River, was attacked in the open streets, and on resisting an effort to rifle his pockets was knocked down, and his skull, over his right eye, crushed. On Saturday night a Mr. McCormick was proceeding home in the western section of the city, in company with two ladies, when he was assaulted and dragged from the ladies, but retaining his presence of mind fell, and was carried off by his accomplices. young man was also shot last night as he entered ais dwelling on Eutaw street, the ball carrying off part of his ear, and a second ball striking the door as he entered. The authorities seem to be afraid to offend these lawless gangs, who are so useful at ward meetings and city conventions.

The number of deaths in this city during the past week was ninety-two, of which forty-eight were under ten years of age, and eight died of

BOUNTY LAND CLAIMS.

Department of the Interior.

Person Office, December 1, 1852.

THE YERY LARGE NUMBER of applications for bounty land with which this office has been filled within the last two years, and the numerous calls for information relative to the condition of claims not yet admitted, have thrown upon the bureau a very heavy correspondence. All the diligence possible has been used to answer such inquiries without delay; but it has been found impracticable to give information promptly in so great a number of cases, chiefly in consequence of the vague and undescriptive character of most of the letters and memoranda asking for it. Parties and agents are therefore required to conform to the following directions in all communications or memoranda asking the condition of applications for bounty land:

The claim must be distinctly but briefly described by stating the name of the applicant, and if it be that of a widow or minor children, the name in full of the deceased soldier for whose service she or they claim; when it was filed; the residence of the party when the application was transmitted; or, if filed by an agent, the residence of the agent; the corps to which the applicant or the husband or parent belonged; in what war the service was performed upon which the claim is founded; and whether the case has been suspended. Hereafter, in the letter from this office acknowledging the receipt of a claim, the registered number of the case will be given; and in every inquiry in relation to cases filed after this date, the number thus given must be stated; it must also be endorsed upon additional evidence offered in them.

thus given must be stated; it must also be endorsed upon additional evidence offered in them.
